Descriptions of Labor Categories Offered

Category: Chief Executive Officer and President

Informa's current management structure includes the office of the Chairman within which the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and President share management responsibilities. The Office of the Chairman has overall responsibility for project coordination and resource allocation issues. The Office of the Chairman directs the overall configuration of the projects and reviews final results. For projects dealing in major strategic issues, a member of the Office of the Chairman often serves as the primary contact with the client and oversees major strategic decisions. The members of the Office of the Chairman must be well known at the executive level of agribusinesses and upper levels of government, and are required to maintain a rapport within industry circles. They must have the ability to address industry groups on a variety of issues and demonstrate deep understanding of the agribusiness sector. Minimum education requirement is a master's level in business or economics, and the position requires at least 20 years of industry experience.

Category: Executive Vice President (EVP)

The EVP directs analytic efforts in specific research areas and integrates these resources into specific projects. The EVP also has day-to-day control over VPs, SCs, SAs, analysts and consultants. The EVP serves as the direct client contact and evaluates the level of service required in each situation. An EVP must be able to communicate to clients complex economic scenarios and assist the clients in developing conclusions based on the economic data. Minimum education requirement is master's level education in business or economics, and this position requires at least 20 years of industry experience.

Category: Senior Vice President (SVP)

The SVP has responsibility for day-to-day supervision of projects. In other organizations, this position is also called a "senior project manager." The SVP coordinates resource allocations within and among projects and provides assistance in specific analytic areas. The SVP also configures end products and reviews completed work. An SVP must be able to identify critical issues for clients, organize the resources necessary to solve the problems, and communicate conclusions to clients. Minimum educational training is master's level education in business or economics, and this position requires at least 15 years of industry experience.

Category: Vice President (VP)

The VP works with other project participants and through training or experience provides guidance to SCs, SAs, consultants and analysts. In other organizations, this position might be known as a project manager. The VP is also an integral participant in the research and analytic aspects of projects. Minimum educational training includes master's level academic work in business or economics, and the position requires at least 10 years of industry experience.

Category: Senior Consultant/Senior Analyst (SC, SA)

SCs and SAs are primarily responsible for project implementation, research, analysis and project execution. SAs have specific commodity responsibility and SCs have specific project responsibilities. Minimum educational training includes bachelor's level academic work in business or economics, and the position requires at least five years of industry experience.

Category: Consultant/Analyst

These individuals are primarily responsible for assisting SCs, SAs, VPs and SVPs in project implementation and execution. Minimum training includes bachelor's level academic work in business or economics. Industry experience is helpful, but this position can be filled with a candidate directly from a college or university.
